

FORUM

“The Academy’s FORUM provides an independent platform where stakeholders from across the life sciences sector can connect and take forward national discussions on scientific opportunities and technology trends”

Professor Sir John Bell FRS HonFREng FMedSci,
Regius Professor of Medicine, University of Oxford &
Government Bioscience Advisor

The Academy's FORUM was established in 2003 to catalyse connections across industry, academic and healthcare sectors.

Through the FORUM we aim to promote:

- Sustainable translation of research outputs into health and wealth gains, by exploring new models of:
  - Regulating and governing health research that keep pace with scientific and technological developments.
  - Partnerships and funding in the discovery and development pipeline of medical innovations.
- A vibrant innovation ecosystem, by encouraging organisations from academia, industry and the healthcare sector to collaborate and share expertise, skills and resources to address new health, scientific and economic challenges.
- A strong UK industry, by fostering an environment that attracts and retains pharmaceutical companies in the UK, supports home-grown biotechnology and medical device companies, and encourages entrepreneurs and investors to establish new enterprises.
